Don't worry about the people. They are a short term tactical problem. While removing them will remove the trucks...that cannot be done with violence. Focus on the trucks. Focus on decreasing their sustainability. You have the powers to declare that area a restricted area due to ongoing investigation and security concerns. No one goes in. Cordon it. Put salt and/or sand plow trucks in front of and behind the convoys where possible. This is your best defense against someone doing something foolish with a truck and pulling a runner. Then...slowly...and deliberately...start removing the vehicles

Also have area businesses turn off their wifi. Have structures from the protesters removed. This was used to demoralize the occupy protestors and was more effective than was anticipated. People will go home after a few hours of no wifi.
